FEBRUARY RECAP

February was a strange month for the journey. At the beginning of the month, I had to withdraw from a gig with the band because of sickness. I continued to work through the sickness on the disCOVERED video at home: recording, editing, and emailing files back and forth with Charlie, who lives in Cincinnati. Shoutout to my Aunt Janis for letting me borrow her photo backdrops for the project. I recorded all the video footage in a day in my basement and then edited for the next couple days when I had free time. My designer Justine helped with the thumbnail designs and logos and my marketing consultant Jillian helped me with promoting. I decided to release on Valentine's Day because of the content and nature of the song and I think it turned out great! Thanks to everyone who watched, liked, and shared. I'm not sure how often I'll do the videos, but they have been really fun so far.

I have also been working on website design throughout the month, emailing and getting on Zoom calls with Jus and Jill. We are planning on an April release date. I finished the month with one of the most ambitious gigs I've had: playing from 10PM-1AM at The Downtown Bistro! It was nice to shake off the rust and work with the new gear I've acquired. I can't lie, I was definitely tired and disoriented after a while, but seeing the folks who came in still there singing along and having fun an hour later made me want to stay even longer. Thanks to everyone who came out, even if you couldn't stay for long. It meant a lot!

For March, I will continue trying to get gigs for the summer, working on website design, and creating and recording new music for future tangible release.
