OCT & NOV RECAP

In October and November, I spent most of the time focusing on school, but had 5 solo gigs, with one cancelled in late October. I played at Newport on the Levee twice, with one show being outside and one inside The Gallery. October 2nd, I played a rainy show at the Buckeye Lake Yacht Club, and then I played a private fundraiser for a person running for school board in Granville. In November, I was able to perform at a benefit for a member of the Lancaster community who has stage 4 pancreatic cancer. There were hundreds of people there and it was an honor to be asked to participate in such an important event. To finish November, I played at Horvath's Harbor on Black Friday.

October & November have been challenging with my school projects and the workload of a senior, but also because I haven't been able to do what I love to do - play a lot of live music. After 3 shows were altered or cancelled, I've learned that every show matters and to take advantage of good weather and attendance when I have it. I never cut shows short and it'll be a strange day when I end on time with a great group of people listening. I look forward to having more live shows in the new year, and wish you a happy holidays!

SUBSCRIBER CONTENT

For this month's subscriber-only content, I've decided to share a demo from an assignment for my Songwriting 3 class. The prompt was to write a spoken-word rock song and the instructor cited bands like Rage Against The Machine and others. This isn't my typical style, and it's not for everybody, but it was one of my more interesting projects this semester. I hope you enjoy "Mindreader", a spoken-word rock banger.
